

Lebanese president leaves office amid mounting economic crisis

Lebanon's political crisis has deepened after Michel Aoun vacated the presidential palace with no successor in place and a crumbling economy. Lebanon is now ruled by a caretaker cabinet and prime minister-designate, who has failed to form a government over the past six months.

Beirut, November 1 (RHC)-- Lebanon's political crisis has deepened after Michel Aoun vacated the presidential palace with no successor in place and a crumbling economy. Lebanon is now ruled by a caretaker cabinet and prime minister-designate, who has failed to form a government over the past six months.

This comes as the country has been reeling from the deadly 2020 blast at the Beirut port and 2019's financial meltdown, which pushed over 80% of the population into poverty and prompted mass anti-government protests.

As one of his final acts as president last week, Michel Aoun signed a U.S.-brokered maritime border deal with Israel.

<https://www.radiohc.cu/en/noticias/internacionales/303660-lebanese-president-leaves-office-amid-mounting-economic-crisis>

Radio Habana Cuba