

UK protester throws eggs at King Charles on behalf of victims of police, slavery, colonialism

British police arrested a 23-year-old activist for pelting eggs at King Charles and Camilla during a visit to York, to protest the destruction wrought by the British monarchy.

London, November 10 (RHC)-- British police arrested a 23-year-old activist for pelting eggs at King Charles and Camilla during a visit to York, to protest the destruction wrought by the British monarchy. None of the eggs hit the pair, and the young activist continued to protest as police restrained him on the ground.

The protester, who was not identified by name, yelled: “You know what? I’m with the citizens of Earth, every person who stands against fascism worldwide, all of the victims of police brutality, all the victims of slavery and colonialism and imperialism, every single person who has died, men, women and children. Those eggs are the only justice that they’re ever going to see, for all of the people who have died so that that man could wear a crown.”

<https://www.radiohc.cu/en/noticias/internacionales/304545-uk-protester-throws-eggs-at-king-charles-on-behalf-of-victims-of-police-slavery-colonialism>

Radio Habana Cuba