Cryptome founder says he should be prosecuted with Julian Assange for publishing classified documents

Cryptome welcomes documents for publication that are prohibited by governments worldwide, in particu[...] use technologies, national security, intelligence, and secret governance -- open, secret and classified docu[...] this site only by order served directly by a US court having jurisdiction. No court order has ever been ser[...] gagged by order. Bluffs will be published if comical but otherwise ignored.

Cryptome Mail List: https://www.freelists.org/list/cryptome

Cryptome Twitter: @Cryptome_org

Cryptome Substack

Reference Assange Extradition Hearing

Cryptome marks 26 years, June 1996 - June 2022, thanks to uncountable mostly anonymous doxer[...]

The founder of the website Cryptome.org has asked to be indicted for violating the Espionage Act.   Cryptome's founder John Young says he should be added as a co-defendant in the prosecution of WikiLeaks's Julian Assange because he published the same leaked government documents at the center of the U.S. case against Assange.

Washington, December 2 (RHC)-- The founder of the website Cryptome.org has written to the U.S. Justice Department with an unusual request: He is asking to be indicted for violating the Espionage Act. Cryptome's founder John Young says he should be added as a co-defendant in the prosecution of WikiLeaks's Julian Assange because he published the same leaked government documents at the center of the U.S. case against Assange.

While Assange faces 175 years in U.S. prison if he is extradited, the U.S. government has never moved to prosecute Young, who says he published the documents two days prior to WikiLeaks. Earlier this week, The New York Times and four international newspapers called on Biden to drop the charges against Assange, saying "publishing is not a crime."

---

https://www.radiohc.cu/en/noticias/internacionales/306731-cryptome-founder-says-he-should-be-prosecuted-with-julian-assange-for-publishing-classified-documents

Radio Habana Cuba