Havana, December 10 (Prensa Latina)-- With the presence of the First Secretary of the Communist Party of Cuba (PCC), Miguel Díaz-Canel, the second and last day of the Fifth Plenary Session of that political organization began in Havana on Saturday.

According to the official website of the PCC, the agenda of the meeting at the Palace of Conventions in Havana includes the evaluation of the current situation of the country and the measures to confront it, both in the socioeconomic and political-ideological fields.

In the first session of this V Plenum, held the day before, the Political Bureau of the PCC accounted for its work since April of this year to date, and discussed and approved the Strategy to strengthen the integral role of the Young Communist League.

The attendees also discussed and finally ratified a report on the management of the Political Bureau in 2022, a period in which, despite the complexities, progress was made in the implementation of the agreements of the 8th CPC Congress.

The text highlighted the updating of the system of attention to the Party's grassroots organizations, with the aim of strengthening their operation and mobilization capacity and the strategy of improvement of the organs of the People's Power.

The meeting also analyzed the role of the workers in the transformation of the economic management, inflation and its impact on the population, the prevention and confrontation of corruption, crime and illegalities and the causes of the migratory processes.

The Central Committee called for October 2023 the II National Conference to be held in three working commissions whose documents will be previously analyzed with all the communist militancy of the country.
