

Brazilian Senate identifies another 23 implicated in attempted coup

Image not found or type unknown

The Brazilian Senate continues its investigation of groups of radical supporters of the defeated president Jair Bolsonaro, who invaded and looted the Parliament buildings, the Federal Supreme Court and the Planalto Palace, seat of the Executive Power, on January 8th.

Brasilia, January 26 (RHC)-- The Brazilian Senate continues its investigation of groups of radical supporters of the defeated president Jair Bolsonaro, who invaded and looted the Parliament buildings, the Federal Supreme Court and the Planalto Palace, seat of the Executive Power, on January 8th.

With requests for military intervention and rejection of President Luiz Inácio Lula da Silva's assumption of power, the violent dissidents also damaged works of art and destroyed furniture and work equipment.

Due to these events, several lines of investigation were opened that led to the arrest of several of the terrorists and the Public Security of the Federal District (DF) was ordered to act.

The former-secretary of Public Security of the FD Anderson Torres was arrested, the governor of the territorial division, Ibaneis Rocha, was removed from office, and they identified soldiers involved in anti-democratic actions.

If the characterization of the coup leaders is confirmed, this will be the second representation sent by the Senate to the PGR. On the 13th, Pacheco handed over to the attorney general, Augusto Aras, a first data on the vandals. It transpired on the occasion that the Senate requested the opening of an investigation on 38 people. Subsequently, the PGR denounced 39.

Adding the two profiles, the number of people identified by the Senate as involved in terrorist acts in Congress could reach 61. Likewise, G1 announced this Wednesday that Lieutenant Colonel Nélio Moura Bertolino will assume command of the Presidential Guard Battalion.

Bertolino will replace Colonel Paulo José Fernandes da Hora, investigated for the violent invasion of Planalto. In addition to the absence of members of the Presidential Guard to protect the government premises, there is a video in which Da Hora argues with a military policeman who was trying to arrest the extremists.

<https://www.radiohc.cu/en/noticias/internacionales/311782-brazilian-senate-identifies-another-23-implicated-in-attempted-coup>

Radio Habana Cuba