

U.S. pandemic-era federal food assistance benefits to end in March

Image not found or type unknown

Millions of people around the United States will lose their additional disbursement of federal food assistance on March 1st.

Washington, February 27 (RHC)-- Millions of people around the United States will lose their additional disbursement of federal food assistance on March 1st.

The Supplemental Nutrition Assistance Program, or SNAP, had increased benefits as part of the emergency response to the COVID-19 pandemic.

Households will lose a minimum of $95 a month as families continue to face increased food prices and data show at least one in eight U.S. kids regularly face hunger.

<https://www.radiohc.cu/en/noticias/internacionales/315037-us-pandemic-era-federal-food-assistance-benefits-to-end-in-march>

Radio Habana Cuba