New day of caravans against US blockade announced

Havana, March 25 (RHC) The organizer of the Bridges of Love movement, Carlos Lazo, announced for this Sunday a new edition of the caravans against the blockade of Cuba in different cities of the United States and the world.

Lazo recalled that this initiative of his group and other solidarity organizations takes place every last Sunday of the month, and on this occasion they have already confirmed actions from Miami, Seattle and New York.

Along with the caravan - specified the Cuban professor living in Seattle - a direct tweet will be sent to President Joe Biden asking him to lift the economic, commercial and financial siege imposed on Cuba more than 60 years ago.

Bridges of Love is one of the groups that integrates the growing wave of rejection inside and outside the US territory demanding an end to the blockade.

Biden promised to reverse the failed policies towards the island of his predecessor, Donald Trump (2017-2021), but two years after his arrival at the executive mansion there are hardly any signs in that direction. (Source: Prensa Latina)
