

Cuba denounces US violation of human rights through sanctions against Cuba, Iran and Syria

China denounces United States violation of human rights

Havana, March 28 (RHC) China denounced this Tuesday that during 2022 the United States committed human rights violations. A report by the Information Office of the State Council (Cabinet) referred to the imposition of these sanctions. China defined the United States as the most prolific sanctioner in the world because "it has measures that restrict the economic and social development of other countries." In the case of the Caribbean island, the report deplored the persistence of the economic, financial and trade sanctions. "On November 3, 2022, the General Assembly of the United Nations Organization voted for the third time to condemn the United States for imposing economic sanctions against Cuba." At another time, the article mentioned Washington's refusal to close the prison opened at the Guantánamo Bay. It deplored the sending to prison of some 780 individuals without trial and the inhumane treatment to which they are subjected. Likewise, the Chinese text recalled that last year independent experts from the UN Council on Human Rights reported that the United States had violated international law. The six-part Cabinet document listed facts, figures, and the opinions of experts and international organizations.
