

Jazmine Hughes leaves The New York Times after condemning Gaza assault in violation of newsroom policy

New York, November 6 (RHC)-- The New York Times Magazine's award-winning writer Jazmine Hughes resigned after signing an open letter condemning Israel's genocide in Gaza.

The move constituted a violation of newsroom policy.

New York Times contributor Jamie Lauren Keiles, who describes himself as a "religiously observant Jew," also left the publication after signing on to the letter.
