

*Many remain in northern Gaza,
as Israel bombs everywhere
despite evacuation order*

Image not found or type unknown

A large, thick gray 'X' is drawn over a rectangular frame. The 'X' is composed of two diagonal lines that intersect in the center. The frame is a simple black border. This graphic typically signifies that an image has been removed or is unavailable.

Gaza City, November 10 (RHC)-- Hundreds of thousands of Palestinian civilians still remain in the northern Gaza Strip despite warnings from Israeli military to move to the south of the strip, as the Tel Aviv regime continues its deadly bombing campaign in the besieged enclave.

The Palestinians who are still in the region say the trip to the south is too dangerous amid Israeli relentless bombing, according to The New York Times. The report came a day after the Israeli military claimed it had given a four-hour window for civilians inside Gaza City to evacuate the area and move to the south earlier in the day. This is while Israel has continued to rain down bombs on the south.

In a phone interview, Jinan al-Salya said she and her family decided to leave northern Gaza and head south despite the risks. She said that they hadn't gone far on Saturday, when they came under fire and had to return north on foot, walking between bloody bodies sprawled along the road.

"It was a horror situation. I'm in total shock," Salya said, adding that she believed the shell that hit their car had been fired by an Israeli tank.

Ahmed Ferwana, who lives in the al-Shati refugee camp in the northern Gaza Strip, said he thought it was too dangerous to venture to Rafah. Ferwana further noted that he felt it was "better to die at home than to die on the street" after his neighborhood was hit by heavy Israeli airstrikes.

Even foreigners and dual nationals who are being allowed to leave Gaza say they will not take the deadly risks involved in getting to the only exit, the Rafah border crossing into Egypt.

Iyad al-Bazam, Gaza's interior minister, said on Tuesday that 900,000 people remained in northern Gaza, adding that Jabaliya and Al Shati were the most densely populated areas.

David Satterfield, the U.S. special envoy for Mideast humanitarian issues, also estimated on Saturday that at least 350,000 to 400,000 people remained in northern Gaza.

According to UN monitors, during a four-hour evacuation window on Sunday, fewer than 2,000 made the move.

Israel launched the war on Gaza on October 7 after Palestinian resistance movement Hamas launched a surprise attack, dubbed Operation Al-Aqsa Storm, into the occupied territories in response to the Israeli regime's intensified crimes against the Palestinian people.

Israel has already ordered some 1.1 million living in northern Gaza to evacuate to southern regions as the regime prepares a full-scale ground invasion into the small blockaded territory.

Tel Aviv has also blocked water, food, and electricity to Gaza, plunging the coastal strip into a humanitarian crisis.

According to the Gaza-based health ministry, at least 10,328 Palestinians have been killed in the strikes, most of them women and children, while nearly 26,000 others have been injured.

<https://www.radiohc.cu/en/noticias/internacionales/338949-many-remain-in-northern-gaza-as-israel-bombs-everywhere-despite-evacuation-order>

Radio Habana Cuba