

Media workers protest New York Times for biased, anti-Palestinian coverage of Tel Aviv's attacks on Gaza in laundering genocide.”

Palestinian writer and poet Mohammed El-Kurd spoke with reporters outside The New York Times offices: “It is incredible to see hundreds of writers and journalists take part of this — in this action, because it’s telling us that journalistic malpractice, such as omitting facts and passive voice and denying war crimes and treating the lives of Palestinians as though they are less than, and demonizing and vilifying and dehumanizing Palestinians and Palestinian resistance, is completely unacceptable, if we are going to be truthful and if we are going to be loyal to the rules of this profession we call our own.”
