

Cuban president congratulates Latin American medical family on their day

Havana, December 3 (Web Network)-- The First Secretary of the Central Committee of the Communist Party of Cuba and President of the Republic, Miguel Díaz-Canel congratulated this Sunday the great family of Latin American medicine on its day -- December 3rd.

In his profile on the social network X, the Cuban ruler highlighted the professionalism, dedication and deep sense of human solidarity with which doctors, paramedics and other health workers fulfill every day the most challenging of missions inside and outside the Homeland.

To the great family of #MedicinaLatinoamericana: Congratulations and infinite thanks. For the professionalism, consecration and deep sense of human solidarity with which they fulfill every day the most challenging of missions inside and outside the Homeland.

Since December 3, 1933, every new anniversary of the birth of Carlos J. Finlay (1833-1915) and the Day of Latin American Medicine is celebrated annually.

For Cuba, the date becomes a recount in health matters for the benefit of the population and peoples of other lands, and a departure to assume new commitments and challenges in the difficult task of maintaining high public health indicators, even in the midst of the limitations imposed by the economic, commercial and financial blockade of the United States.
