

Second Session of the Cuban Parliament concludes today

Havana, December 22 (RHC) -- The Second Ordinary Session of Cuba's National Assembly of People's Power (parliament) in its 10th Legislature will conclude today with the presentation of three bills, among them the Public Health bill.

According to the program of this last day, the more than 400 Cuban deputies will also discuss the draft law on the Military Prosecutor's Office and the bill on the System of Attention to Complaints and Petitions of the People. They will also review the update of the legislative schedule for the coming year.

On this day, the approval of the agency and the provincial government that will be accountable in July 2024 before the National Assembly and that of the agency under high supervision are foreseen.

In the midst of a complex social context, since the debates in commissions began last Monday and in the last two days of sessions, attended by the leader of the Revolution, Raul Castro, and President Miguel Diaz-Canel, the parliamentarians have addressed the situation of the country with a critical view.

The day before, the results of the implementation of the Family Code were highlighted, although it was recognized that there are still ways to go in its implementation.

According to the Minister of Justice, Oscar Silveira, the implementation of this law, just one year and three months ago, has gone through multiple challenges of the legal institutions for its implementation.

The implementation of the Criminal Procedure Law was also discussed in this Second Ordinary Session.

In this regard, the President of the People's Supreme Court, Rubén Remigio Ferro, pointed out that since the entry into force of the law, more than eight training actions have been carried out for all the parties involved in the process.

He also recalled that among the new figures included in the Law are the nullities, the forms of participation of the victim, the modeling of the holding of the oral trial with the different parties and subjects, the means of challenge, the judicial control of the precautionary measure of provisional imprisonment, habeas corpus, among others.

Another of the topics addressed had to do with the results of the report of the results of the Highest Audit of the Ministry of Agriculture, in which it was learned that at the end of June, the agricultural production maintained a decrease in relation to the plan and to date of the 14 fundamental productions, only vegetables and corn are fulfilled.

During the meeting, the leader of the Cuban Revolution, Raúl Castro, acknowledged the work of the workers of the Ministry of Industries and especially the work of its head, Eloy Álvarez.

The minister recalled that in recent years, the Cuban economy and industry have been going through a complex scenario associated with the tightening of the blockade imposed by the United States on the island, the impact of the world crisis, the effects of the pandemic and the increase in the price of imported inputs, among other factors.

However, in spite of the complexities and limitations, continuity has been given to the process of consolidating the work of the ministry and its role in the recovery of the national economy. (Source:PL)
