

U.S. Supreme Court rejects case that sought to silence Palestinian advocacy group

Image not found or type unknown

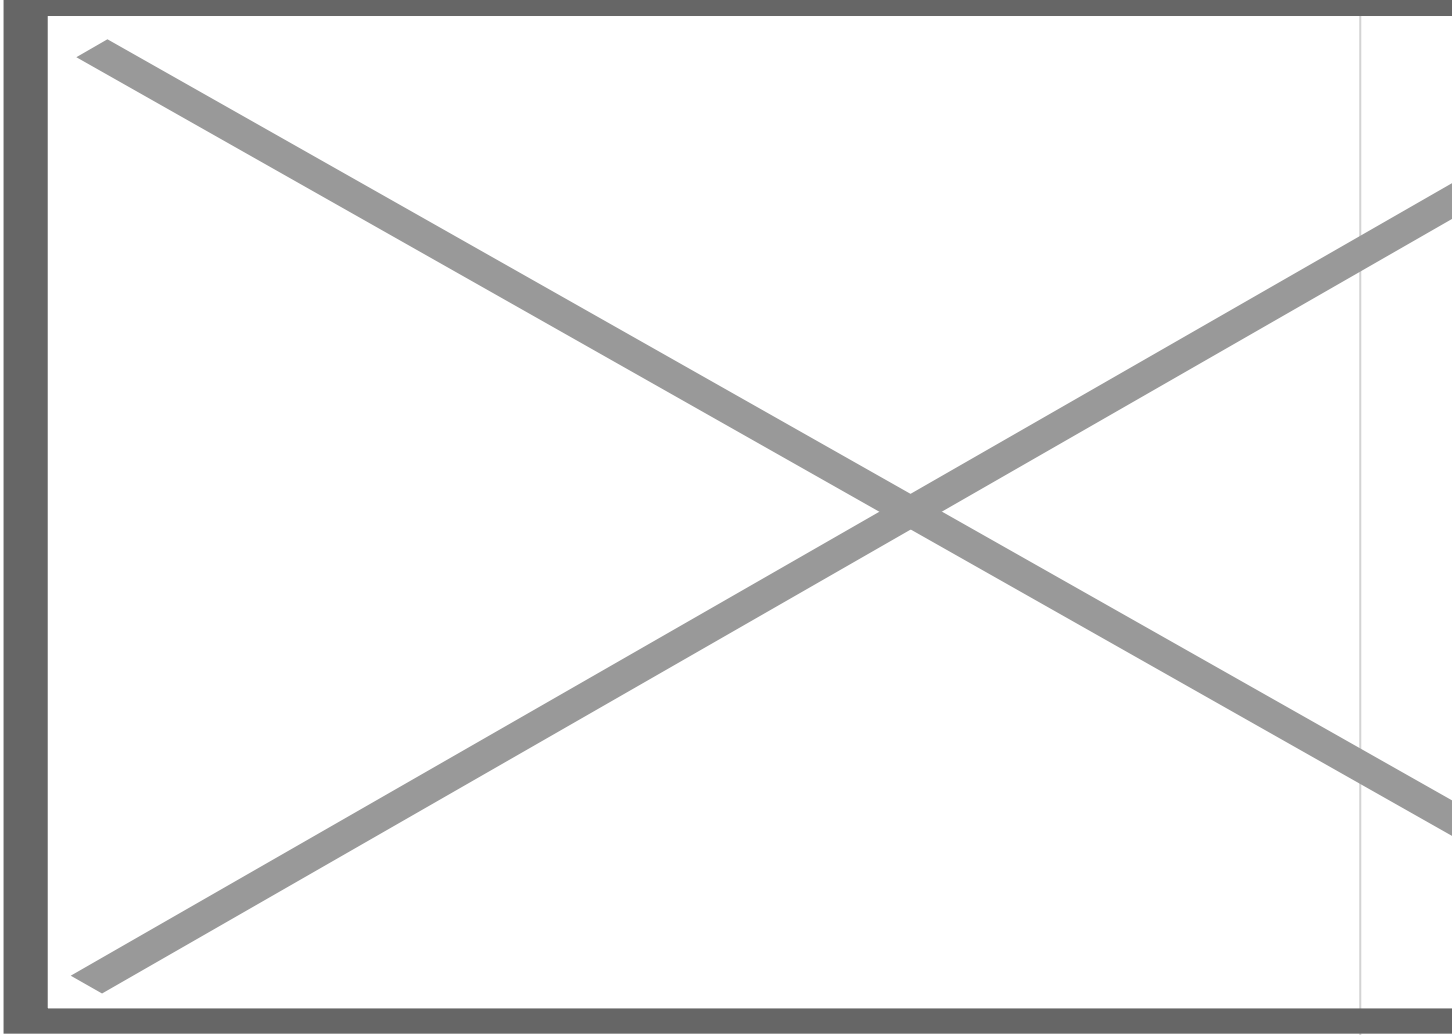

Image Credit: U.S. Campaign for Palestinian Rights

Washington, January 23 (RHC)-- The U.S. Supreme Court has declined to hear a case brought against the organization U.S. Campaign for Palestinian Rights.

The decision upholds lower court rulings that rejected baseless claims the Palestinian advocacy group provides “material support” for terrorism.

The Center for Constitutional Rights, which represents the group, welcomed the Supreme Court move and said: “Now, as the government of Israel is carrying out an unfolding genocide against Palestinians in Gaza, it is more important than ever that activists be free to speak out without fear.”

<https://www.radiohc.cu/en/noticias/internacionales/345220-us-supreme-court-rejects-case-that-sought-to-silence-palestinian-advocacy-group>

Radio Habana Cuba