

Washington's Airstrikes Kill Civilians in Several Syrian Towns

Damascus, September 24 (RHC)-- Reports from Syria say that the U.S.-led airstrikes have killed civilians. In Raqqa, the first wave of strikes reportedly killed 30 people, mostly local residents. In Aleppo, another unconfirmed report said 11 people were killed, including four children.

Video footage showed bodies being pulled from the rubble of a destroyed building. In the town of Kfar Daryan, a resident said the U.S.-led strikes had killed displaced civilians who had fled the violence.
