

New York City high school students walk out to protest genocide against Gaza

New York, February 19 (RHC)-- In New York City, high school students across the city walked out of class for their second mass coordinated action against the war on Gaza. Students are continuing to organize despite what they say are attempts by school administrators to intimidate and censor them.

One protest organizer told reporters: “We students recognize that we have a direct responsibility to act here, where our institutions’ complicity with Zionism has been made loud and clear. We recognize our responsibility to the people of Gaza and stand in unwavering solidarity with them.”
