

Venezuelan president promotes new communications system

The Venezuelan head of state spoke about economic growth when remembering that "Venezuela found its way." | Photo: Presidential Press

Caracas, June 3 (RHC)-- The president of Venezuela, Nicolás Maduro, stated that he has been promoting a new communications system in order to break the oppressive hegemony in the world and confront censorship against the South American nation on social networks.

In the fourth edition of #NicoLive, which was broadcast on his TikTok social network account, the Venezuelan head of state highlighted the importance of the system of streets, networks, media, walls and radio Bemba to achieve that goal.

"Build communications instruments this time. That is why I have been promoting the new communication system of streets, networks, media, walls and "radio bamba." It is a new system to break the oppressive hegemony of the powerful in the world of those who try to censor Venezuela," he declared.

On several occasions, the president has reiterated the need to disseminate the achievements of the Bolivarian Revolution on digital platforms, as well as to give positive management to social networks. Likewise, he has expressed his rejection of messages that are manipulated and disseminated on social networks and digital platforms to generate uncertainty in the population.

President Maduro spoke about economic growth when remembering that "Venezuela found its way." "This year, we are going to grow more than 8 percent. Just in the first quarter, which is the hardest, we had a growth of 7 percent," he confirmed.

<https://www.radiohc.cu/en/noticias/internacionales/356408-venezuelan-president-promotes-new-communications-system>

Radio Habana Cuba