

UK climate activists spray orange paint at Stonehenge and airport housing Taylor Swift airplane

Image not found or type unknown

London, June 23 (RHC)-- In the United Kingdom, two climate activists were arrested at a London airport this morning after they doused private jets with orange paint. Among the jets reportedly at London's Stansted Airport during the protest was a private plane owned by pop superstar Taylor Swift.

The group Just Stop Oil said in a statement: "Billionaires are not untouchable, climate breakdown will affect every single one of us."

The protest came a day after Just Stop Oil activists sprayed orange paint on the ancient megaliths of Stonehenge. The protesters are demanding the U.K. government sign a legally binding treaty to phase out all fossil fuels by 2030.

<https://www.radiohc.cu/en/noticias/internacionales/358136-uk-climate-activists-spray-orange-paint-at-stonehenge-and-airport-housing-taylor-swift-airplane>

Radio Habana Cuba