Havana, Sep 9 (RHC) The delegation that represented Cuba at the Paris 2024 Paralympic Games will return to the homeland on Monday night, after a performance that once again has aroused admiration and affection in our people, led by the eleven-time star of these events, Omara Durand.

Along with her, all the champions and other members of the delegation, including technicians, medical personnel, and managers, will receive on their arrival the embrace of the country's authorities, who have followed from the first moment the entire performance, full of emotion, dedication and loyalty to the Revolution, as always characterized Cuban athletes with disabilities.

The total number of medals won: six golds, three silvers and one bronze medal gave them a meritorious 24th place among the participating countries, also the result of the Cuban sports movement, although the most important thing in this type of sporting confrontation is not the podiums, but the human being and the values formed in a society like ours.

On Tuesday, one day after their arrival, they will be officially welcomed at the Sports City (8:00 a.m.), from where they will leave for a tour of several groups from different sectors, which will have the opportunity, on behalf of all Cubans, to pay them the most heartfelt affection and affection for their performances.

Among the institutions to be visited are the Center for Genetic Engineering and Biotechnology (CIGB), the special school Solidarity with Panama, the Cuban International Tobacco Company (ICT) and the Eide Mártires de Barbados.

As expressed by the First Secretary of the Communist Party of Cuba and President of the Republic, Miguel Díaz-Canel Bermúdez, in several messages on his X account, this delegation shook the Homeland by their example, talent, gratitude and loyalty.

Welcome champions
