Buenos Aires, November 20 (RHC)-- Argentinian leaders, officials and influencers a far-right political grouping “Las fuerzas del cielo,” to support the head of state, Javier Milei and in which, according to militants of the nation incite hatred.

Influencer Daniel Parisini, known as “Fat Dan”, was one of the organizers and presented the space as “the armed wing” of libertarians, while declaring “the grouping that is being formed here today is the armed wing of La Libertad Avanza”.

The meeting took place in the Buenos Aires city of San Miguel and was attended by the journalist and supporter of La Libertad Avanza, Agustín Laje, the Buenos Aires Congressman Agustín Romo; the Secretary of Worship and Civilization, Nahuel Sotelo; the National Congressman Santiago Santurio; the Undersecretary of University Policies, “Profe” Alejandro Álvarez.

According to the Tiempo Argentino platform, “the idea of Las Fuerzas del cielo is to train leaders who can publicly defend the project headed by Milei at national level. Sotelo, one of the speakers, stressed the importance of winning 'the cultural battle' in Argentina to leave behind discussions such as Agenda 2030 on the environment and the issues that interest the 'left'”.

In a warlike and violent speech, Agustín Romo pointed out that “victory in war does not depend on the number of soldiers, but on the forces that come from heaven”.

In the same way, the libertarian referents launched a public call on a web page so that those interested can register in the space.

Likewise, the National Deputy for Santa Fe, Esteban Paulon, filed a criminal complaint against “Las Fuerzas del Cielo” for incitement to hatred, public intimidation and incitement to collective violence.

The registration notice states that “participation is limited to those affiliated or willing to affiliate with La Libertad Avanza.”
