

Consumer Financial Protection Bureau on brink of being shuttered after saving consumers $21 billion

Consumer Education ▾

Rules & Policy ▾

Enforcement ▾

404: Page not found

We can't find the page you're looking for. Visit our home page for helpful tools and resources, or contact us and we'll point you in the right direction.

Visit homepage

Contact us

Washington, February 11 (RHC)-- The Donald Trump administration has effectively shut down the Consumer Financial Protection Bureau.

The bureau's acting director, Russell Vought, who was the architect of Project 2025, has closed the bureau's office for the next week and has ordered staff to halt nearly all work.

Vought's move came after Elon Musk wrote a message Friday on X that said "CFPB RIP" along with an emoji of a tombstone. Since its formation in 2011, the bureau has helped return about $21 billion to consumers, but the agency has been long been criticized by Republicans and big business interests.

[SOURCE: DEMOCRACY NOW]

<https://www.radiohc.cu/en/noticias/internacionales/376294-consumer-financial-protection-bureau-on-brink-of-being-shuttered-after-saving-consumers-21-billion>

Radio Habana Cuba