

Protests in Washington, D.C. take aim at health insurance, financial institutions, oil and gas interests

Washington, February 27 (RHC)-- In Washington, D.C., the People's Action Institute led protests outside the headquarters of Blackstone, UnitedHealth and American Gas Association. All three stand to benefit from the GOP budget framework passed Tuesday, which would shower tax cuts on the wealthy while slashing essential services like Medicaid.

One protester told reporters: “Use our taxpayer dollars for our healthcare, for our housing and to transition away from fossil fuels.”
