

China Explores Business Opportunities in Cuban Electricity Sector

Havana, October 30 (RHC)-- China is exploring business opportunities in the Cuban electricity sector through sales of LED street lights and domestic lighting.

The sales director of China's Zhejiang Yabao Limited corporation told reporters that the lamps may last up to 50,000 hours as they are made out of materials appropriate to withstand the island's high temperatures.

The Chinese company has already made contacts with several Cuban enterprises in the electricity sector, the executive said, adding that the upcoming Havana International Trade Fair, opening November 2nd, will offer opportunities to make contacts and relations between Cuban companies and foreign entities.

LED technology contributes a considerable energy and fuel saving, said Raul Yhebra, chief of the technical group with Havana's provincial office for the rational use of energy.

The new lamps have already been installed along Havana's sea front drive, the Malecon, and others will soon illuminate important Cuban thoroughfares.
