Lawfare tactics deployed in Canada against opponents of genocide

Ottawa, April 1 (RHC)-- Zionist lawfare hit Canada again when Dahlia Kurtz, a Zionist influencer, and Neil Oberman, a prominent Zionist lawyer, harangued the police to reopen a closed case of harassment; consequently, they arrested leading anti-Zionist campaigner Yves Engler.

Engler had done nothing wrong, but he was locked up for five days, as he has noted, the reason why he has been targeted is because he is a clear eyed critic of the Zionist lobby who is not afraid to tell the truth.

Here is his typically forthright summary of the main Canadian Zionist lobby groups:

"Together, United Jewish Appeal of Toronto, Montreal, Winnipeg, Windsor, Calgary, Edmonton, Hamilton, London, Ottawa, Vancouver and Atlantic Canada, raise over $300 million annually and have over $1 billion in assets."

"The lobbying arm of UJA/CJA, the Center for Israel and Jewish affairs (CIJA) has over 40 staff and a ten million budget. In addition, B'nai B'rith has a handful of offices across the country. These groups work closely with 'Stand With us Canada', 'CAMERA', 'Israel on Campus', 'Honest Reporting Canada' and other (often extreme right wing) Israeli nationalist political organizations."

The recent arrest of pro-Palestinian activist Yves Engler in Canada on trumped-up case filed by a Zionist lobbyist points to unchecked growth of Zionist network in the country.

CIJA is perhaps the most prominent Zionist lobby group in Canada. It certainly does a lot of lobbying. The official Canadian lobby register lists the topics, government departments and lobbyists from CIJA who are involved. It declares 18 separate lobbyists on the register, CIJA, like the rest of the lobby, is inserted in the regime's International Network, the digital network.

Richard Clark of CIJA was amongst the attendees at its inaugural event in 2018. Clark has now infiltrated government circles, filling the role of Chief of Staff to Ontario's Ministry of Finance.

In 2019, several Canadians attended including, Daniel Coron, representing B'nai B'rith Canada, who now works for allied voices for Israel. Qasim Hafiz, Middle East analyst, Christians United for Israel, Canada.

Yves Engler, a prominent pro-Palestine activist, was released on bail after five days in a Montreal jail for criticizing Zionism on social media. the charges against him are seen as an attack on free speech.

Hafiz is a British Muslim who has become a collaborator with Zionist groups by condemning radical Islam. The implication of this coordination is that all the key lobby groups are a part of a coordinated network.

Gil Hoffman, of Honest Reporting, let the cat out of the bag on this at an online meeting in 2022.

"Today I went to a meeting at the foreign ministry where there were organizations that work in the pro-Israel sphere that they hosted, that are nongovernmental organizations."

"And there were 60 of us there in the room, and the government was explaining what it's doing and how they want to work better with us."

"It was quite impressive. We've got WhatsApp groups now that are run by the government, where we share information, working together."

This coordination is evidently not an anti-Semitic trope about a supposed Jewish conspiracy, it is a factual account of a network strategically organized to pursue certain political aims, those of the genocidal Zionist project.
