Nautical Activities for Tourism

In an effort to make its tourism product more attractive and diverse, Cuba is committed to develop nautical activities, a modality with great potential but little exploited to date.

Tourism authorities told local ACN news agency their considerations on the opportunities and challenges to promote recreational activities in Cuban marinas and nautical areas.

According to Alexander Sierra, Ministry of Tourism (MINTUR by its Spanish acronym) Development CEO, in the plan designed to boost an industry that seeks to be reinstated as engine of the economy by 2030, the above modality is one of the main priorities.

In this regard, he stressed they are now concentrating their actions in knowing the situation in this scenario, in order to execute investment to improve conditions and services in marinas, nautical centers, piers, moorings, harbors, shipyards, dry marinas and fishing and diving zones.

It is a process that must be well articulated with other policies and plans implemented by the Caribbean nation, as the Law of Ports and the one of Fishing, the shipyard recovery program, or the promotion of tourist cruise operations, among other strategies, the minister concluded.
