

British Student Convicted in Terrorism Trial Held Largely in Secret

London, November 18 (RHC)-- In Britain, a law student has been convicted on a terrorism charge following a trial that was largely conducted in secret.

Erol Incedal was found guilty of possessing a bomb-making document last Tuesday, but a judge barred the media from reporting the verdict until Monday.

Much of the evidence against Incedal was heard in secret after prosecutors cited national security concerns.
