French Sport Movement Pushes for Candidacy to Olympics

Paris, Feb 12 (Prensa Latina) The French sports movement continues its activities today to obtain the necessary support to put Paris forward as a candidate for the headquarters of the 2024 summer Olympic Games.

The initiative is boosted by the French International Sport Committee, who aims that the capital and France might conceive an Olympic and paralympic project with resolution to win, with an estimated cost of more than 4,5 million euros.

The French Minister of Youth and Sports, Patrick Kanner, Thursday showed his support for the project that intends to make use of the already existing infrastructure.

The latest information shows that the Mayor of Paris will submit the candidacy for voting to the city council in April and that it will announce its final decision in June.

Experts say that there are divisions in deciding if they should present the candidacy to host the Olympic Games of 2024 or the Universal Exhibition of 2025.

The discussion focused on various elements, like the fact that some of them think that the exhibitions have contributed more to the city than a big sport event. On the other hand, the unfavorable economic situation that faces the country is also an important issue.

All the candidate cities must present their dossier next September and the name of the host will be revealed in 2017.

Paris played host to the summer Olympics in 1900 and 1924.
