Havana, February 21, (RHC), -- About 24,700 polling stations were constituted in Cuba for April's partial elections of delegates of the Municipal Assemblies of the People's Power (local authorities).

This period will have 4,884 polling stations less than the previous elections, the secretary of the National Electoral Commission, Tomas Amaran, said in statements to Juventud Rebelde newspaper.

As part of the elections, the assemblies to nominate candidates in districts, a process that will last until March 25, will began on February 24.
