

Cuban Support for Africa Praised

Brussels, February 23 (RHC-PL) -- Alhaji Muhammad Mumuni, secretary general of the (ACP), yesterday in a press release praised Cuba's support to African nations in different areas.

Mumuni highlighted Cuba's role in the fight for independence of various African countries and its collaboration not only sending highly qualified human resources but also training various generations of local professionals in many fields.

Mumuni praised particularly the role of Cuba in fighting the Ebola epidemic and expressed the admiration and respect of ACP members for Cuba, which he described as a very high-profile country member, an example of solidarity and cooperation.

Mumuni made the statements during a meeting held with Norma Goicochea, Ambassador of Cuba to Belgium, Luxembourg and the European Union. Goicochea highlighted the importance of ACP for Cuba, while reiterating the Cuban Government's willingness to continue its active participation within the organization and also its cooperation with member countries.

She also appreciated the support given by the African, Caribbean and Pacific Group of States to Cuba, particularly in the struggle for the elimination of the U.S. economic, commercial and financial blockade imposed on Cuba for more 50 years.
