Cuba won 3-1 (17-25, 25- 21, 25-13 and 25- 12), and according to Ariel Sainz, Cuban volleyball national commissioner and president of the Cuban Federation of the sport, this was the 2nd match of this kind held in the country from a total of 3.

He added that these are match ups to train the athletes from the Asian nation overlooking the 2020 Tokyo Olympics, and Cubans to their next international commitments.

Meanwhile, Rodolfo Sanchez, Cuban head coach, stressed the importance of these matches for the young team, and he asserted they aspire to obtain good results in the World League this year.

He also emphasized the collective work of local athletes for the sake of victory, beyond individual results.

Triple jump

First attempt, 17.08 m. Second attempt, 17.13 m, and Guantanamo's triple jumper (1.93 m, 87 kg) put an end to any doubts in Eugene. His record surpassed other set by a Cuban triple jumper: Yoelbi Quesada (17.04 m) in September 19th, 1992 in Seoul.

He behaved very natural when I approached one of his training sessions at the Pan American Stadium. He was there along with her teammate Liadagmis Povea and his trainer Marcos Juvenal.

Nowadays, one concern hovers around his mind and he focused hard on solving the issue: What are the experiences you learnt from 2014? What are your expectations in 2015?

My jump of 17.24 m in Havana last year helped me to get invited to some legs of the Diamond League. It was a very tough competition. I was not supposed to be nervous. But I was. There were many ranked triple jumpers there.

In fact, I performed very well. But the thought of committing fouls was always in my mind. I jumped several times way behind in the plasticine board, and this element plagued me all the season.

I am working hard to stabilize my marks over the 17.40 m-17.50 m. I am only 17, but 2015 is a key season to me. We are talking about the Pan American Games in Toronto and the IAAF World Championship in Beijing. It would be a dream to attend one of those events. There will be a strong rivalry internally. Pedro Pablo Pichardo and Ernesto Reve have both proven international results.

So, are you correcting mistakes?

I am an athlete who depends more on my strength rather than my technique right now. As I acquire maturity, things will be balanced. My efforts right now are addressed to the run-up and takeoff, the transition from the hop to the step, as well as the final jump.

An ideal mix?

I would mix virtues of Jonathan Edwards (18.29), Yoelbi Quesada (17.85), and Ernesto Reve (17.58). Each has his own characteristics. Personally, I prefer the speed of the British, the technique of El Chispa, and the power of Reve.

MARCOS JUVENAL ADDS...

“The key of our work with Lazaro lays in the improvement of his results and stability over the 17-m mark, based on a methodology suitable for his age. We were able to spot that Lazaro was jumping way behind the jumping table.

In order to fix his mistake, we increase the rigor of his fitness in search of major intensities not yet found, as well as the refinement of his run-up.

The instability showed is in line with his age. Therefore, it will be paramount the evolution in the relation running-jumping”.

“Lazaro is a very explosive athlete with a strong jump (6.80 m). When he is able to coordinate it with his own pace, well, we see world-class jumps. He has accepted every suggestion and our dream is to achieve results above the 17.30 m. He will be among those considered to participate in Toronto and Beijing. He has already achieved the IAAF’s qualifying mark. But only two triple jumpers will attend the upcoming events”.

Among his teammates, Lazaro is seen as a future star. All of his results so far place him on top of his category. This is an element to take into account.
