Havana, March 16 (RHC) – Executives from Google's in-house think tank Google Ideas are in Cuba to tour universities and meet computer science students.

They include the deputy director of Google Ideas, Scott Carpenter, and Brett Perlmutter, a top Google figure who went to Cuba last June with executive chairman Eric Schmidt.

A previous Google high level delegation met students at the University of Information Science (UCI) in Havana, a technological institute and several public computer centres known as “Youth Clubs.”
