

Cuban Air Traffic Control System Shows Positive Results

Havana, April 16 (RHC) — The head of the Air Traffic Group with the Cuban Civil Aviation Corporation, Juan Jose Cruz, described as positive the results of the island in terms of air traffic control.

In statements to Prensa Latina news agency during a workshop on the Regional Search and Rescue System and Civic-military Coordination, Cruz said that this is issue of crucial importance in modern times.

Since the 1990s, the International Civil Aviation Organization has made efforts to strengthen civic-military air coordination and this works well on the island because it this is regulated by the state and backed by the law.

Due to this state regulation system allows efficient air navigation since it includes the joint participation of the Armed forces, the Interior Ministry, the Ministry of Communications, and of Justice.
