

WikiLeaks Publishes Full Database of Hacked Sony E-mails

Washington, April 17 (RHC)-- WikiLeaks has published a full searchable database of more than 170,000 e-mails from Sony Pictures Entertainment. The documents first came to light last year following a hack U.S. officials blamed on the North Korean government.

WikiLeaks says the full database shows a close relationship between Sony and the Barack Obama administration, with nearly 100 U.S. government e-mail addresses in the archive.

The e-mails show Sony executives reacting to WikiLeaks' publication of a leaked chapter of the secret Trans-Pacific Partnership trade deal, and discussing an upcoming meeting with U.S. Trade Representative Michael Froman. The archive also shows close ties between Sony and the RAND Corporation, a military think tank whose board members include Sony Pictures Entertainment CEO Michael Lynton.
