

TSA Chief Reassigned over Security Flaws at Airport Checkpoints

Washington, June 3 (RHC)-- A U.S. government probe has found wide security lapses at U.S. airports. Checkpoint screeners failed to detect fake explosives and weapons in 95 percent of tests carried out by undercover agents.

Melvin Carraway, the acting head of the Transportation Security Administration, has been reassigned as a result. At the White House, Press Secretary Josh Earnest said steps are being taken to address the issue.

<https://www.radiohc.cu/en/noticias/internacionales/58142-tsa-chief-reassigned-over-security-flaws-at-airport-checkpoints>

Radio Habana Cuba