Cuba Faces Toronto Parapan Games with Cautious Optimism

Cuba faces the Para-Pan-American Games in Toronto with cautious optimism, and the goal to match or exceed the medals reached 4 years ago in Guadalajara where 27 golds, 16 silvers and 11 bronzes were obtained.

Rene Jimenez, head of Sports for Disabled People department at the Cuban Institute of Sports, said the delegation is satisfied with trainings and a high efficiency to make those purposes come true is expected.

The executive declined to forecast position in the medal table, aware of the rise of other countries, and that Cuba participates in fewer disciplines than other regional powers.

"We are confident of the potentialities of our athletes, despite other countries with greater financial resources have been trained to ascend," Jimenez recognized. In addition, the fall from 2nd to 4th in Toronto 2015 medal table just held makes the speech is more cautious, without sacrificing the goals.

Cuba came with 67 athletes classified by record, but Track and Field felt a reduction, leaving the delegation in just 57 members, who will compete in 71 of 393 disciplines convened.
