

July 2015: Third Hottest Month in Cuba Since 1951

Havana, August 12 (RHC-PL) -- July 2015 was the third hottest month in Cuba since 1951, after registering an average temperature of 28.2 degrees Celsius, above 0.7 the historical average for the seventh month of the year.

According to the Climate Center at the Meteorology Institute, the values of maximum and minimum monthly average were 33.1 and 23.3 degrees, exceeding the usual figures 0.5 and 0.7, respectively, the daily stated.

About 11 maximum temperature records were set in July, with the highest report of 38.2 degrees, in Contramaestre, Santiago de Cuba, on July 29th.

The Casablanca weather station in Havana had 20 days with conditions of intense heat, a figure above the historical average of the month, which is 17 days.

Radio Habana Cuba