Havana, November 4 (RHC)-- The upcoming 10th Congress on Marine Sciences will allow for an open exchange between Cuban and U.S. academics, experts and business executives of institutions in the sector.

The director of the Cuban National Aquarium Guillermo Garcia said that over 100 U.S. specialists will attend the forum, considered a record figure of accreditations from the United States in the event.*

The forum will discuss 37 presentations of U.S. experts and will hear three key-note lectures by executives of institutions of that country.

The forum, known as MARACUBA, take place every three years and grants the Cuban Prize of Ocean Sciences.
