Russian Sports Body Reacts Against Doping and Deplores Politicization

The Russian Athletics Federation (RAF) confirmed today that it will present to the world governing body of soccer a report that includes its program of action against doping.

The Russian body adds that the document will present the reaction of the Russian sports organization to the findings presented on Monday by a committee of the World Anti-Doping Agency (WADA), according to a statement released to the press.

The www.rusathletics.com portal reports that Russia will present as soon as possible to the International Association of Athletics Federations (IAAF) a document containing the anti-doping program of the RAF, concrete steps for its implementation (including those already carried out) and its reaction to the conclusions of the WADA.

The statement reiterates Moscow's willingness to a strategic cooperation with the IAAF, in particular to solve the problems in the world athletics and in Russia.

A report presented yesterday with great media hype by an investigating commission of the WADA requests that the IAAF suspended Russia temporarily from all its tournaments, and that the accreditation of the Moscow anti-doping laboratory be retired.

It also requests the discharge of the director of the above-mentioned lab, Grigori Rodchenko, as an accomplice of various illegal actions.

Vitaly Mutko, Minister of Sports of Russia, said that the WADA president, Richard Pound, abused his authority by recommending the IAAF do not allow the participation of Russian athletes at the Olympic Games in Rio de Janeiro. "...there is a report of the WADA commission, and there is an opinion of Pound, who abused slightly the authority of the commission itself," said Mutko to the federal Rossiya 24 TV channel.

The Russian minister considered that Pound intervened as a politician when evaluating the Russian system of anti-doping saying that "...If you read the report you will realize that the commission simply refers to some unverified sources and unconfirmed facts... It is no more than speculation, stressed the Russian minister.

The RAF, meanwhile, deplored that the WADA eluded the established protocols to address doping issues.

For his part, the vice chairman of the Sports Committee of the State Duma (Lower House of Russian Parliament) Sergei Poddubnyi, considered that the recommendations of the WADA are but politically motivated... "They are purely political statements that have nothing to do with sports," stressed the legislator, as Russian athletes always show their skills in stadiums and gyms, and will never mix politics with sports," according to the deputy minister of the Russian committee.
