NICARAGUA

Havana, February 17 (RHC)-- Cuba and Nicaragua have signed new agreements to strengthen scientific and academic cooperation contributing to better trained personnel devoted to the protection of animal, plant and human health.

Wednesday's signing was at the 10th International Congress 'University 2016', which is holding sessions in Havana through Friday.

In statements to reporters, Tania Rivas, Director for Foreign Relations with National Center for Animal Health, said the agreements provide for exchange of expertise and knowledge, and technology transfer.
