

Five Tiny Pacific Islands Disappear Due to Climate Change

Manila, May 13 (RHC)-- In another sign of the impact of climate change, at least five tiny Pacific islands have disappeared due to erosion and rising sea levels.

According to reports, the small islands are part of the Solomon Islands, one of the most densely populated Pacific Island nations.

<https://www.radiohc.cu/en/noticias/internacionales/93406-five-tiny-pacific-islands-disappear-due-to-climate-change>

Radio Habana Cuba