

Multiple Suspects at Large after Shooting in U.S. city Cincinnati: Police

Washington, March 27 (RHC-Xinhua) -- Multiple suspects are still at large after firing shots early Sunday morning in a packed nightclub in Cincinnati, a major city in the mid-east U.S. state of Ohio, leading to one death, one in "extremely critical condition" and another 15 injured, local police said.

According to Cincinnati police Chief Eliot Isaac, so far no arrests have been made.

The investigation is ongoing, City Mayor John Cranley said.

According to Cincinnati City Manager Harry Black, the conflict is believed to have begun between specific groups or individuals earlier in the day, escalating and ultimately leading to the tragedy occurring at the nightclub.

Cincinnati Assistant Police Chief Paul Neudigate said that the police do not suspect this action as terrorism.

Hundreds of people were inside when the gunfire occurred in the Cameo nightclub after 1:00 a.m. local time (0600 GMT) on Sunday, Neudigate told the local WLWT TV station.
