

U.S. Government Website Photo Swaps Green Hills for a Mountain of Coal

Washington, April 25 (RHC)-- In the United States, the Bureau of Land Management, the BLM, has debuted a new cover photo for its website: a towering pile of coal. The 2004 photograph was supplied by the Peabody Coal Company. It shows an 80-foot coal seam at an open-cut coal mine.

Until recently, the BLM website's main photograph showed two boys wearing backpacks gazing across a wild landscape of rolling hills. The website's new look comes after Interior Secretary Ryan Zinke lifted an Obama-era ban on coal mining leases on federal land.

<https://www.radiohc.cu/index.php/en/noticias/internacionales/128060-us-government-website-photo-swaps-green-hills-for-a-mountain-of-coal>

Radio Habana Cuba