Spain recovered more than three million doses of fake drugs and arrested 14 people in the largest European operation against the traffic of anabolic substances and banned substances in sport.

The Civil Guard hit the biggest blow in Europe to the elaboration, falsification and distribution of these doping substances for athletes, with the dismantling of a network led by important athletes.

According to the source, the so-called Dianu operation had its main cell in the southern city of Malaga (Andalusia), where these illicit products were marketed without sanitary control.

The chief commander of the Specialized Crime Group of the Central Operative Unit (UCO) of the Civil Guard, Juan Jesus Reina, explained that the criminal organization received the stimulants from India and China, sometimes already packaged with own brands.

In addition of Malaga, the network was based also in Alicante, Valladolid and Valencia. It had ramifications in France and Germany, and made 3,340 shipments of these prohibited drugs to gyms in and outside Spain in the last two years.

Of the 14 detainees - among them an expert physician in sports medicine - all are Spanish except two Venezuelans, said Reina.

The anabolics were distributed between bodybuilders through two outstanding athletes of this modality, who ran installations in the localities of Valladolid, Fuengirola and Arroyo de Miel (Malaga).

According to the Unit, the criminal group could have entered for this activity about 500 thousand euros in the last three years.

"All substances were distributed in the world of bodybuilding, except some that were used as sexual enhancers," said the police officer.

As part of the operation, 25 records were taken and more than 120 different types of substances were used, such as steroids, anabolic, hormones and active ingredients and sexual enhancers.

In addition, bank accounts were blocked for more than two million Euro and confiscated machinery and tools for the manufacture and conditioning of stimulants.
