

Trump Adviser Katharine Gorka Helped Defund Anti-Hate Group

Washington, August 18 (RHC)-- Fallout from President Donald Trump's handling of the Charlottesville violence came amid revelations that the Trump administration recently cut funds to organizations dedicated to fighting right-wing violence. One group, Life After Hate, which works to help white nationalists and neo-Nazis disengage from hate and violent extremism, was set to receive a grant under the DHS's Countering Violent Extremism program, approved by the Obama administration.

When Trump DHS policy adviser Katharine Gorka released the final list of grantees in June, Life After Hate had been eliminated. Gorka is the wife of Trump adviser Sebastian Gorka, who has been linked to a Hungarian far-right, Nazi-allied group.
