

Constitutional Court Authorizes Participation of Evo Morales in Presidential polls in 2019

La Paz, November 29 (RHC)-- The Full Chamber of the Plurinational Constitutional Court (TCP) ruled on Tuesday in the city of Sucre (southeast) in favor of reelections of national and subnational authorities.

This enables President Evo Morales to present his candidacy for the 2019 general elections.

The members of the TCP unanimously, enabled the nomination for the general elections at the end of 2019 and the mid-2020 for president, vice president, 154 legislators; 9 governors, 339 mayors and 3,500 councilors and advisors, according to Bolivian news agency ABI.

"All citizens and all the people who were limiting the law and the Political Constitution of the State are, precisely, enabling these people to run, because definitely, the one who chooses is the Bolivian people," said the president of the TCP, Macario Lahor Cortez, in remarks to the press at the headquarters of the Bolivian Judicial Branch
