

Report says U.S. Navy SEALs were ordered to remain silent on war crimes

Washington, May 16 (RHC)-- The New York Times is reporting that U.S. Navy SEALs who witnessed their platoon chief commit war crimes in Iraq were encouraged not to speak out, and told they could lose their jobs for reporting him at a private meeting with a superior officer last year.

According to a confidential U.S. Navy criminal investigation obtained by the Times, the commandos said they saw Special Operations Chief Edward Gallagher stab and kill an unarmed teenage captive, shoot to death a young girl and old man, and fire indiscriminately into crowds of civilians.

But when the men on Gallagher's team called a private meeting with their troop commander and demanded an investigation, they were told to stay quiet on the matter, and no action was taken.

The group of seven SEALs eventually were able to force an investigation, and Chief Edward Gallagher was arrested in September on more than a dozen charges, including premeditated murder and attempted murder. If convicted, he could face life in prison. His trial begins May 28th.

<https://www.radiohc.cu/index.php/en/noticias/internacionales/190883-report-says-us-navy-seals-were-ordered-to-remain-silent-on-war-crimes>

Radio Habana Cuba