Communist Party leader Raúl Castro took the opportunity to renew Cuba's unwavering support for the Venezuelan people and their constitutional leaders led by president Nicolás Maduro.

The Venezuelan legislator reiterated his country's support for Cuba at a time both sister nations are the target of stepped up aggression by the Donald Trump Administration in Washington's effort to re-instate the infamous Monroe Doctrine over Latin America.

Diosdado Cabello also took the chance to thank the Cuban government and people for the humanitarian work being developed by thousands of Cuban health professionals and teachers in Venezuela under existing cooperation programs.
