

Venezuela exposes failed plan to attack Justice Palace in Caracas

Caracas, August 31 (RHC)-- The government of Venezuela denounced a failed series of attacks against several strategic targets in Caracas, conducted from Colombia, according to information revealed by the Vice President and Minister of Communications and Tourism, Jorge Rodriguez.

Rodriguez presented evidence of the plan orchestrated from Colombia with the intention of destabilizing the government of President Nicolas Maduro. According to Vice President Rodriguez, the criminal plan has been going on with the complicity of Colombian President Ivan Duque.

According to Jorge Rodriguez, the plan included an explosion at Caracas' Justice Palace that were meant to be carried by terrorists trained in Colombian territory and commanded by Venezuelan opposition politician Julio Borges. The failed attack was also going to affect very populated areas that surround the court complex, such as Plaza Diego Ibarra Square, and could have been fatal to many innocent people, Rodriguez said.

He also showed aerial pictures and coordinates of the camps where at least 200 individuals were receiving military training, highlighting that those centers were still active and urging Colombia's President Ivan Duque to assume responsibility of allowing them to function. Cliver Alcala, a man previously involved in previous attacks against President Maduro's life, was pointed out by Rodriguez as the commander of these centers.

According to the evidence, the purchase of drones and weapons were also carried out in Colombian territory.

Several individuals have been captured thanks to investigations. Some were arrested at the time they acquired supplies for the explosives building. Among them, is Luis Gomez, a Colombian-Venezuelan citizen, arrested with explosive devices, who is cooperating with the Venezuelan authorities by providing information.

Rodriguez also showed the picture of a deactivated bomb meant to use in the attack, which the Venezuelan officials were able to disable in time to avoid a tragedy.
