

Mike Pence's office reportedly interfered in foreign aid money to favor Christians

Washington, November 7 (RHC)-- A new ProPublica investigation reveals how Vice President Mike Pence's office interfered with foreign aid programs in order to reroute the money to Christian groups abroad, particularly in Iraq.

The investigation reveals how longtime officials worried that the White House interference in USAID funding programs could be unconstitutional because it favored one religion -- Christianity -- over others. The officials were also concerned that perceptions that the U.S. was favoring some religious groups could worsen sectarian divisions in Iraq.

<https://www.radiohc.cu/index.php/en/noticias/internacionales/206970-mike-pences-office-reportedly-interfered-in-foreign-aid-money-to-favor-christians>

Radio Habana Cuba