

The Lancet says biggest threat to Brazil pandemic response is President Bolsonaro

London, May 9 (RHC)-- The biggest threat to Brazil's ability to successfully combat the spread of the coronavirus and tackle the unfolding public health crisis is the country's president, Jair Bolsonaro, according to British medical journal The Lancet.

In an editorial, the Lancet said Bolsonaro's disregard for and flouting of lockdown measures is sowing confusion across Brazil, which is now recording record numbers of COVID-19 cases and deaths, and is fast emerging as one of the world's coronavirus hottest hot spots.

<https://www.radiohc.cu/index.php/en/noticias/internacionales/222254-the-lancet-says-biggest-threat-to-brazil-pandemic-response-is-president-bolsonaro>

Radio Habana Cuba